Time to split up!

- Children will go with the reading/math support teachers so that they can have some fun while the parents learn some important information.

What is Title 1 reading and math support?

Title 1 is a federally funded program to help provide supplemental support to help students become better readers and mathematicians.

The amount of Title 1 money that schools receive is based on the percentage of students who received free and reduced lunches.

Title 1 schools are monitored for professional development, student growth, and parent engagement. There are certain requirements that must be fulfilled by the district.

Roles of the Reading and Math Support Teachers

Diagnosis and Assessment

- Screen new students
- Develop, coordinate, and administer assessments
- Analysis of strengths and needs

Instruction

- Plan and collaborate with teachers
- Coach and demonstrate
- Provide intensive instruction

Leadership

- Staff Development
- Program Development
- Teacher Support
- Resource person

How do students qualify for Title 1 support?

- Criteria is set based on the combination of testing results from the end of last year and the beginning of the current school year.

What does support look like?

Title 1 students are seen in a variety of formats, most likely in small groups or on an individual basis.

Title 1 Reading support typically takes place when small group instruction or centers are taking place in the regular classroom.

Title 1 Math may or may not take place during math time.

Title 1 instruction may take place either inside or outside of the regular classroom, depending on the needs of the students and the size of the grade level group.

Instruction is provided by our reading and math support teachers and paraprofessionals. Paraprofessionals are supervised by certified teachers.

Lesson Plans/Programs

plans are written by the reading/math support teachers.

Use of research-based and supplemental programs to meet student needs .

Typically, reading support happens daily unless there are scheduling conflicts.

Flexible grouping structures

Instruction is focusing on a combination of grade level skills and the student's area of need

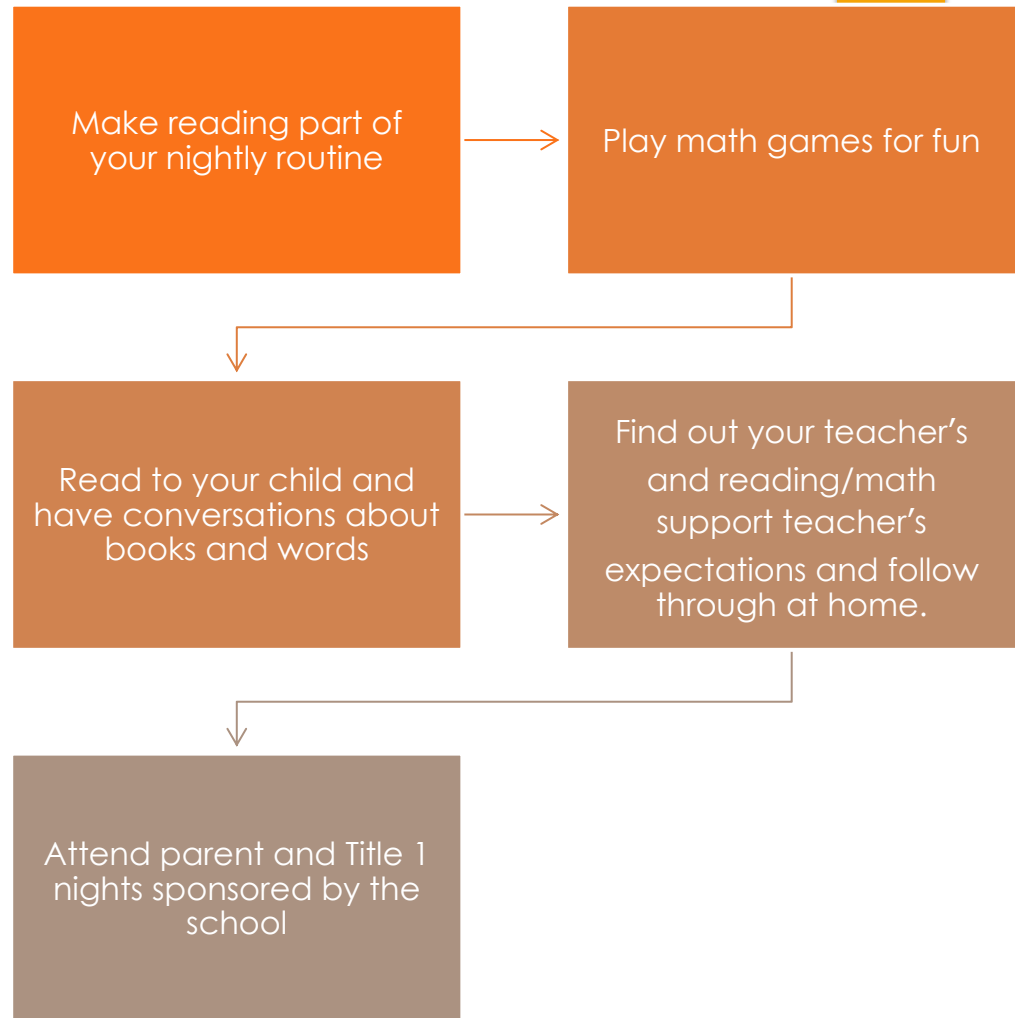

How long do students remain in the Title 1 program?

Students can exit the program during the year if their assessment scores are beyond the trimester's expectations.

At the beginning of each year, we look at a new set of data to determine who qualifies. Therefore, that means that if students were in support last year, they do NOT automatically qualify for support the next year.
